Summary

- s.1 In The Noble Dhāraṇī “Dispelling Vighnas” the Blessed One gives his disciple Ānanda a dhāraṇī related to the deity Gaṇapati that can bind vighnas. The ritual instructions for this dhāraṇī include reciting this mantra seven times when one wakes up in the morning and tossing a handful of water upwards and downwards, incanting a protection cord, and reciting the mantra in a place where there is an image of Gaṇapati.

Introduction

- i.1 In The Noble Dhāraṇī “Dispelling Vighnas” the Blessed One gives his disciple Ānanda a dhāraṇī related to the deity Gaṇapati that can bind vighnas. The ritual instructions include reciting this mantra seven times when one wakes up in the morning and tossing a handful of water upwards and downwards, incanting a protection cord, and reciting the mantra in a place where there is an image of Gaṇapati. Following the colophon of the main text, a short set of instructions for preparing a vighna-dispelling fumigant has been appended by a later author.

i.2 The Noble Dhāraṇī “Dispelling Vighnas” does not appear to survive in any Sanskrit witness¹ or to have been translated into Chinese. The Tibetan translation does not include a colophon and gives us no indication of when the received text preserved in the Degé Kangyur was translated into Tibetan. A similarly titled text is recorded in the Denkarma² and Phangthangma³ imperial Tibetan catalogs of translated works, so some version of the text had been translated into Tibetan by the mid-ninth century.⁴

i.3 This translation was prepared from the Tibetan translation preserved in the Tantra Collection (rgyud ’bum) and Compendium of Dhāraṇīs (gzungs ’dus)^{5 6} in the Degé Kangyur, in consultation with the Comparative Edition of the Kangyur (dpe bsdur ma), the Stok Palace Kangyur, and the Phukdrak Kangyur.

The Noble Dhāraṇī

Dispelling Vighnas

1.1

Thus did I hear at one time. The Blessed One was dwelling in Śrāvastī at Jeta’s grove, Anāthapiṇḍada’s park. At that time, the Blessed One addressed venerable Ānanda as follows:

1.2

“Ānanda,⁷ any leader of an assembly who upholds this heart mantra of Gaṇapati⁸ will accomplish any ritual and anything they intend, and will accomplish any mantra.

*tadyathā | namo ’stu te | kaṭa kaṭa maṭa maṭa dara dara ḍaha ḍaha grhṇa
bhañja bhañja | namo ’stu te | ruru cacaye svāhā | abhutrā
vinaduḥkhanamanceddha para saṃgacchati | ha ha ya mahāhasti kṣatanan pragovayemo kuru kuru curu curu muru muru namo namaḥ svāhā⁹*

- 1.4 “One should rise in the morning, recite the mantra seven times, and toss a handful of water upwards and downwards. All vighnas will be bound. Someone who wants to accomplish this mantra should tie twenty-one knots on a white cord, tie it on their wrist, and accomplish the vidyāmantra. All vighnas will be bound. If this mantra is read aloud even once in a place where there is an image of Gaṇapati,¹⁰ vighnas will not pose an obstacle.”
- 1.5 After the Blessed One spoke, the entire assembly was pleased, and the world with its gods, humans, asuras, and gandharvas rejoiced and praised what the Blessed One had said.
- 1.6 This concludes The Noble Dhāraṇī “Dispelling Vighnas”.
- 1.7 If one fumigates themselves with smoke from a mixture of yellow bdellium, bat feces, and all-stealing excrement,¹¹ then even when one has traveled close to a place infected with disease, one will not be affected. If one comes into contact with someone infected, it will be quickly dispelled.¹² At home, this mantra is used for bhūtas and beings who cause harm.¹³

Notes

1. The Sanskrit title given in the text varies across sources and appears to be corrupt in many cases. Toh 655 has Āryaviḡnavināyakāratādhāraṇī, Toh 959 has Āryaviḡnavināyakāradhāraṇī, F reads Āryavinayakasūtra, J, K, and Y have Āryaviḡnavināyakāratrasūtra, and S has Āryaviḡnavinayakarātāsūtra. The Tibetan titles of Toh 655 and 959, 'phags pa bgegs sel ba'i gzungs, suggest the Sanskrit equivalent to be Āryaviḡnavināyakadhāraṇī, which has been used in this publication.
2. pho brang stong thang ldan dkar gyi chos 'gyur ro cog gi dka' chag, Toh 4364 Degé Tengyur vol. 206 (mdo 'grel, jo), folio 303.b. See also Hermann-Pfandt 2008, p. 244.
3. Phangthangma (dkar chag 'phang thang ma), Beijing: mi rigs dpe skrun khang, 2003, 29. See also Kawagoe 2005, p. 21.
4. The text listed in the Denkarma and Phangthangma catalogs is titled 'phags pa bgegs sel ba'i mdo (The Sūtra for Dispelling Viḡhnas). This is the title given to the present work (with minor variations) in the Drakmar (brag mar), Phukdrak (phug brag), Namgyal (rnam rgyal), and Gondlha (gon d+ho la) scriptural collections.
5. [note 0023b212...]
6. Note that there is a discrepancy among various databases for cataloging the Toh 959 version of this text within vol. 101 or 102 of the Degé Kangyur. See Toh 959, n.5, for details.
7. Following H and N in reading kun dga' bo. Toh 655, Toh 959, S, and F read: dga' bo. While it is somewhat unclear, it seems most plausible that the person being addressed here is in fact Ānanda (kun dga' bo) and not Nanda (dga' bo), given that he is referred to in the previous line with the title “venerable” (tshe dang ldan pa).
8. Following Toh 655 and Toh 959: tshogs kyi bdag po su gang tshogs kyi bdag po'i snying po 'dzin pa des. The text draws a direct parallel here to the term tshogs kyi bdag po (gaṇapati) in the general sense and the term as a proper name for the deity Gaṇapati. H and N, however, read dga' bo tshogs kyi bdag po'i snying po 'dzin pa des, “Ānanda, one who upholds the heart mantra of Gaṇapati.”
9. This mantra has been rendered as it appears in transliterated Sanskrit in Toh 655 and 959. It has been slightly emended for clarity, but ambiguous and potentially corrupted terms that could not be readily resolved have been left as they appear in Tibetan transliteration.
10. Following F: gang na tshogs kyi bdag po sku gzugs snang ba der. Toh 655, Toh 959, and S read: gang na tshogs kyi bdag po snang ba der.
11. Following the K and Y versions of Toh 959 in reading kun la rku ba'i rtug pa. Toh 655 and Toh 959 read kun la rku ba'i rtag pa. The identity of this substance is unknown and this translation is tentative.
12. Presumably one also recites the mantra above when preparing the mixture.
13. These additional instructions for preparing this ritual substance are not found in F, J, and S, nor are they found in the versions of Toh 655 in K and Y.

This was an important early site for the Buddha's growing community. Anāthapiṇḍada, a wealthy patron of the Buddha, purchased the park, located outside Śrāvastī, at great cost, purportedly covering the ground with gold, and donated it to the saṅgha. It was there that the Buddha spent several rainy seasons and gave discourses that were later recorded as sūtras. It was also the site for one of the first Buddhist monasteries. A type of nonhuman being whose precise status is subject to different views, but is included as one of the six classes of beings in the sixfold classification of realms of rebirth. In the Buddhist context, asuras are powerful beings said to be dominated by envy, ambition, and hostility. They are also known in the pre-Buddhist and pre-Vedic mythologies of India and Iran, and feature prominently in Vedic and post-Vedic Brahmanical mythology, as well as in the Buddhist tradition. In these traditions, asuras are often described as being engaged in interminable conflict with the devas (gods).

This term in its broadest sense can refer to any being, whether human, animal, or nonhuman. However, it is often used to refer to a specific class of nonhuman beings, especially when bhūtas are mentioned alongside rākṣasas, piśācas, or pretas. In common with these other kinds of nonhumans, bhūtas are usually depicted with unattractive and misshapen bodies. Like several other classes of nonhuman beings, bhūtas take spontaneous birth. As their leader is traditionally regarded to be Rudra-Śiva (also known by the name Bhūta), with whom they haunt dangerous and wild places, bhūtas are especially prominent in Śaivism, where large sections of certain tantras concentrate on them.

In the most general sense the devas—the term is cognate with the English divine—are a class of celestial beings who frequently appear in Buddhist texts, often at the head of the assemblies of nonhuman beings who attend and celebrate the teachings of the Buddha Śākyamuni and other buddhas and bodhisattvas. In Buddhist cosmology the devas occupy the highest of the five or six “destinies” (gati) of saṃsāra among which beings take rebirth. The devas reside in the devalokas, “heavens” that traditionally number between twenty-six and twenty-eight and are divided between the desire realm (kāmadhātu), form realm (rūpadhātu), and formless realm (ārūpyadhātu). A being attains rebirth among the devas either through meritorious deeds (in the desire realm) or the attainment of subtle meditative states (in the form and formless realms). While rebirth among the devas is considered favorable, it is ultimately a transitory state from which beings will fall when the conditions that lead to rebirth there are exhausted. Thus, rebirth in the god realms is regarded as a diversion from the spiritual path.

A major śrāvaka disciple and personal attendant of the Buddha Śākyamuni during the last twenty-five years of his life. He was a cousin of the Buddha (according to the Mahāvastu, he was a son of Śuklodana, one of the brothers of King Śuddhodana, which means he was a brother of Devadatta; other sources say he was a son of Amṛtodana, another brother of King Śuddhodana, which means he would have been a brother of Aniruddha).

Ānanda, having always been in the Buddha's presence, is said to have memorized all the teachings he heard and is celebrated for having recited all the Buddha's teachings by memory at the first council of the Buddhist saṅgha, thus preserving the teachings after the Buddha's parinirvāṇa. The phrase "Thus did I hear at one time," found at the beginning of the sūtras, usually stands for his recitation of the teachings. He became a patriarch after the passing of Mahākāśyapa.

A class of generally benevolent nonhuman beings who inhabit the skies, sometimes said to inhabit fantastic cities in the clouds, and more specifically to dwell on the eastern slopes of Mount Meru, where they are ruled by the Great King Dhṛtarāṣṭra. They are most renowned as celestial musicians who serve the gods. In the Abhidharma, the term is also used to refer to the mental body assumed by sentient beings during the intermediate state between death and rebirth. Gandharvas are said to live on fragrances (gandha) in the desire realm, hence the Tibetan translation dri za, meaning "scent eater."

A park in Śrāvastī, the capital of the ancient kingdom of Kośala in northern India. It was owned by Prince Jeta, and the wealthy merchant Anāthapiṇḍada, wishing to offer it to the Buddha, bought it from him by covering the entire property with gold coins. It was to become the place where the monks could be housed during the monsoon season, thus creating the first Buddhist monastery. It is therefore the setting for many of the Buddha's discourses.

During the life of the Buddha, Śrāvastī was the capital city of the powerful kingdom of Kośala, ruled by King Prasenajit, who became a follower and patron of the Buddha. It was also the hometown of Anāthapiṇḍada, the wealthy patron who first invited the Buddha there, and then offered him a park known as Jetavana, Prince Jeta’s Grove, which became one of the first Buddhist monasteries. The Buddha is said to have spent about twenty-five rainy seasons with his disciples in Śrāvastī, thus it is named as the setting of numerous events and teachings. It is located in present-day Uttar Pradesh in northern India.
